Francis Marion University's School of Health Sciences is the University's newest academic division and the home of the University's fast-growing programs in healthcare education.

The School of Health Sciences was approved by the FMU Board of Trustees in 2015 and began operations on July 1, 2016. The school is home to the following programs:

- Department of Nursing
 - BSN Degree
 - RN-to-BSN program
 - RN-to-BSN Veterans Program
 - RN-to-BSN Mt. Pleasant
 - MSN Family Nurse Practitioner
 - MSN Nurse Educator
 - Post-Master's Nurse Educator Certificate
- MS Physician Assistant Studies
- Bachelor's of Science in Healthcare Administration
- MBA with Concentration in Healthcare Executive Management (through FMU School of Business)

Additional planned programs in healthcare specialties are in the pipeline and will also fall under the of the School of Health Sciences.

The School of Health Sciences programs are housed in two beautiful buildings:

- The Luther F. Carter Center for Health Sciences (CCHS) is located in downtown Florence (200 West Evans Street). The MSN programs and the Physician Assistant programs are housed here. This building includes classrooms, laboratories, and a state-of-the-art interprofessional simulation learning environment.
- The Frank B. Lee Nursing Building (LNB) is located on our main campus. The undergraduate nursing program is housed here and the building includes classrooms and a simulation lab.

Recruitment Opportunities:

The School of Health Sciences often visits high schools, technical colleges, hospitals and other organizations for career fairs and educational fairs. If your school or organization is interested in having representatives come and speak to your group about the different educational opportunities we offer, please email Charlotte Kollman to set this up.
